Spring Fling

With Spring fling happening on the 18th of September, in the Outback this year, from 12noon till 3.30pm. Taihape has the opportunity to showcase all its talents in the form of art, baking, preserving, sewing, knitting and woodwork. The winter period is a time to be creative and holding joint stalls is a way of sharing the load. Gumboot Throwing and the Baby Animal Fair will be regular features and a new attraction a cultural food festival by our local caterers to give a TASTE of Taihape. Local clubs and organisations take the opportunity to fund-raise for your specific needs. Registration forms for the market stalls and the cultural food stalls will be available soon.

and... what has the Trust been up to thus far?

We have also shared on pages 2 and 3 writeups about the Taihape Heritage Plaque and Tell me More Projects, which we hope you will find great reading.

The Welcome to Taihape Website has been going through an update which we hope to be finished very soon.

We have been collaborating with the Taihape Community Board and Keep Taihape Beautiful in regards to projects to be completed around the township, be great to see more groups do the same or even come on board.

We will keep you updated on a regular basis in regards to what is happening around Taihape with our events and projects.

Pania Winiata - Events & Projects Co-ordinator

Taihape Heritage Plaque Project

The Taihape Heritage Plaque Project held the first meeting of our volunteer researchers in the last days of May. A wide range of people have come forward. The meeting covered a discussion of the project as a whole. Peter Kipling-Arthur, the lead researcher outlined the research project and the need for accuracy and ethics. Each of the researchers talked briefly about their particular person of interest, and then the group made an initial assessment of the names that had been put forward to date. This year the aim is to look to make the community aware of people from Taihape's earlier years plus to provide a range that is gender and ethnically diverse.

Our next meeting will be at 5.00pm Thursday 24th June at the Town Hall Council Chambers. A review of current progress plus any new researchers will be welcomed. As always an appraisal of any further names suggested by the wider community will occur.

If you too value the history of Taihape, and wish to accompany us on the journey to identify and celebrate the significant contributions made by people who have come from our town and then moved on to greater things, then we would love to hear from you.

Please contact Pania or Sarah at Taihape Community Development Trust or the Project Lead Mr Peter Kipling Arthur.

Tell me More Taihape Project

This project is another heritage project undertaken by the Taihape Community Development Trust. It will produce three anthologies that capture the history of our region through the memories of generations as told to our youth.

Wrapped around the recollections of Taihape past, this is a legacy the Taihape of today will leave for the Taihape of tomorrow. Taihape Community Development Trust is working closely with staff and students at Taihape Area School.

Being involved means more than just history. The students will learn transferrable skills of researching, interviewing, documentation, and verification of information. This project gives the opportunity to create a story based on true events, giving our region a refreshed and dynamic view of its past.

The project will produce three 40-60-page A5 booklets over three years. This year the theme is 'What are we? Buildings and infrastructure'.

A 1-day workshop will be provided on the 1st of July 2021 by Rachel Selby, who grew up in Taihape and was head girl in the mid-60s at Taihape College. Rachael is an indigenous Maori researcher, writer, and teacher from Otaki NZ. Rachael has lectured at Massey University and a kaiāwhina at Te Wananga o Raukawa in Otaki.

The Trust is proud to be promoting the preservation of Taihape's Heritage.

Boosting your Baby's Gut function

Researchers suggest that the developing gut microbiome, in conjunction with environmental influences, may increase infants' vulnerability to functional gastrointestinal disorders

Intestinal bacterial colonisation commences in utero, the infant gut microbiota is not fully established until 2-3 years after birth.

Environmental Influences on the infant gut microbiota^[1]_{SEP};

- (a) Mode of delivery, i.e. Caesarean section (CS) versus vaginal.
A baby's descent through the birth canal presents their first opportunity to receive microbial inoculation by way of their mother's vaginal flora. CS delivery greatly reduces the beneficial flora received, thus promoting dysbiosis from the outset.
- (b) Whether the infant is breastfed or formula fed.
Following birth, there is a rapid period of development within the baby's microbial community. The most powerful contributor to this is human breast milk, which aids healthy growth and development.

The connection between Dysbiosis and Colic^[1]_{SEP}

A healthy gut microbiota contributes to many processes within the body.

- (a) Creating a protective barrier against outside pathogens,
- (b) Assisting with the digestion of food
- (c) Supporting motility and maturation of gut immune defences

Early in an infant's life, dysbiosis and subsequent gut mucosal inflammation have been linked with many gastrointestinal disorders, including colic affecting gut function and gas production, and ensuing pain.

Specific Probiotic strains support digestive health in infants and children^[1]_{SEP}

Many clinical trials have validated the use of L. reuteri DSM 17938 for improved microbial balance in infants and children, and now is available in liquid for ease of administration.

Lactobacillus reuteri DSM 17938 (BioPractica T^m) helps to facilitate the prevention of these disorders, setting these infants on a path towards optimal digestive health long-term.

Gardening in Taihape

Leading on from last month and thinking about focal points in our gardens and creating a journey, we will now talk about the ever changing garden. It will be important throughout the cooler months to lay the groundwork for major changes in the garden which will set us up for spring.

When thinking about your garden it's wise to remember that no garden stays still, a garden is an evolving and ever changing artwork. If you use a planting palette with minimal change then you shall see minimal change for example a garden structured with just hedges, other than the maintenance they will offer little more than a varied shade of green.

Think about the layering of plants and texture. Bigger trees will provide the backbone of your design and offer grey silhouettes in the dappled sunlight. Natural materials like stone and rocks will provide a silvery grey shimmer in the morning dew and the new foliage from bulbs emerging through the bare earth ushering in a new season. This all leads us through the yearly cycle and the changes in our atmosphere, we are privileged in Taihape to have such great growing conditions and have the fullness of four seasons.

Layers upon layers of textures can also tell a story and lead you through the garden on a journey throughout the season change. At the moment it may seem a dreary outlook but carefully planning out your garden will offer year round stimulation for the sensors.

Happy Gardening

St John Update – New Ambulance Station

It has been a while since the last update. I am pleased to report we are making progress for the community!

You may have noticed some activity on the new ambulance station section at Linnet Street. We are getting the last of the geo tech work completed and confirming the survey boundaries in preparation for applying for consents. This is a major step in the right direction. We still require further funding which probably comes as no surprise, so if you have an idea please get in touch.

Previously I mentioned we were planning to start selling bricks, some may be wondering what is happening with this or why are we so slow? The committee made a decision to pause this fundraising initiative until the building project was further advanced. It is our intention to give you the opportunity to buy a brick, numbers of these will be limited. We will let you know when we start selling these so keep an eye out.

INTERIOR STYLING

Colour with in design is a science, it has a full vocabulary and also it's own psychology including principal methods of colour palettes.

All this proven to interrupt what we call Colours.

The science – colour isn't a physical thing it is wave lengths of light that bounces off an object.

All the colours our human eyes can see are what we call a Spectrum (ultra violet and infrared are undetected by our eyes.) To help understand the spectrum we will refer to the two opposites in colour.

Black is when we see an absence of any colour as the wave length's are absorbed, yet white is when your actually seeing all colours reflected equally relayed back to the brain.

Now from the science to the colour psychology as we know meaning - emotion.

How do colours make us feel? We have all been exposure to cultural and historical emotional colour attachments. And lets not forget the business marketing and colour attachments.

Some examples to reflect on – from a western world perspective - remember black associated to death, mystery, evil but also knowledge (as in graduation robes).

White – purity, innocence and cleanliness.

Yellow – is the happiest of all colours, we reflect on the sunshine, warmth, summer. Keep in mind a little can go a long way.

Red – danger, passion, energy, excitement and love. Red draws peoples attention.

Green -the colour of nature a positive colour that gives a sense of balance, growth and if Irish considered good luck.

Blue – can actually slow your heart rate ... Seen as trust, tranquillity and hope. Not the best colour for kitchens or dining room, it one of the most appetizing colours.

Orange -an attention grabbing colour, bold and fun... reminds us all of Autumn.

Grey – Timeless and rock solid, positivity, being neutral the warmth or coolness comes from the proportion and hues of the colour.

Brown- another neutral – colour of, stability and nature.

On reflection I think we all see an enormous array of colour's every day, our brains are bombarded with different colour's hues, and tones our brain can easily jump by muscle memory association which in turn creates an emotion..... Think of it- your child and the big M from Mc Donald's ... Yellow and Red-

Excitement to eat creating energy and love, the Yellow reflecting happiness, warmth from the food making your child appetite satisfied.

Colour and light also have science – a lack of light makes an area timeless – examples are Casino's, they normally have no windows, no clocks, no natural light. Designed on a principal their clients become unaware to the time of day or night therefore people are happy to spend longer than they would gambling.

When looking at colours – think of the room and it's application, reflect on the emotion – is it sad?

Is it happy? - Is it warm? - Is it cold?..... and so on...

Your next project with paint should feed you as a person, forget fashion to a degree and live in a coloured space you are happy to be in.

Happy Painting
