

TALK UP TAIHAPE

Taihape Community Development Trust - November 2022

Taihape People Plaques unveiled

On Tuesday 18 October, our long awaited plaques were unveiled at a morning ceremony at Taihape's REAP office. Dianne Saunders of Ngāti Tamakōpiri Iwi for Taihape, blessed the plaques, which were revealed to family and friends of the research group, the newly-elected Councillors Jeff Wong, Gill Duncan and Piki te Ora Hiroa.

There are nine plaques, with six placed in the windows and three on the walls of shops along Hautapu Street from Blush Florist to Greenstone Insurance.

Over the coming months, we will feature the plaques in Talk Up Taihape, starting with renowned expressionist painter Douglas Kerr MacDiarmid. His story is on page two.

Douglas Kerr MacDiarmid

Expressionist Painter

1922 -2020

A painter of international standing, his works are held in public and private collections from Europe to China and Africa. Douglas MacDiarmid received recognition from his home country in 1990 when he was declared a 'New Zealand Living Cultural Treasure'. His work ranged from landscapes to portraits; and he was known for his varied stylistic approaches and the dynamic use of colour.

Douglas was the younger son of Dr Gordon and Mary MacDiarmid of Taihape. His education started at Taihape District High School. At university in Christchurch, he became part of the "The Group" where his artistic mentors included Rita Angus and Evelyn Page. He retained a fondness for the local Taihape landscape.

In 1946 he left New Zealand seeking "to devour the world". Finally settling in France in 1951 he devoted his life to painting, initially as the archetypal starving artist. He exhibited frequently and from the 1960's began to make a reputation and a living. Douglas had multi-talented versatile painting style in portraits, figures, landscapes, urbanscapes, representational and abstract art; this contributed to his ability to earn living from his art in a very competitive market. He travelled widely painting in Mediterranean. Douglas was also a published author and poet Douglas died in Paris in 2020.

FROM THE Mayor's Desk

Over the last couple of days the new Mayors of Auckland and Christchurch have put a position paper to the Government supporting the need for a pause in the Three Waters Reform and the need for an alternate regional model.

These concepts are not new, and there have been a number of Councils, including our own, saying that the Government needs to pause and to look at how we regionally connect - and we are fully in support of this.

The telling factor here will be the scale - with Christchurch and Auckland being by far the biggest cities within the country their voices carry a lot of weight back to Government.

One of the concerns we hold about the proposed Three Waters reform is the lack of detail and consultation; and at this stage the regional model proposed is a two-pager which requires time to develop.

With regards to a regional model within the Horizons region, we are very well connected with local authority shared services and relationships between Councils in the Three Waters space. However, our region is huge and what may be suitable for some communities will need to be a different model here.

We will be asking Councillors to consider how we respond in the first few meetings of the new triennium.

Last week, the Taihape Business Community and Northern Ward Councillors met with Arthur Morgensten, the owner of Seismic Performance Limited a company that specialises in strengthening earthquake prone buildings. As a result of this meeting he has offered to inspect and provide options for many privately owned buildings in Taihape, alongside the Taihape Town Hall, at no charge. This will be discussed further at the Council Meeting this week.

Thank you to those who came to the first Council meeting on 25 October where I was inducted as Mayor and our Councillors were sworn in. The new Council timetable is filling up rapidly. We will have a series of training sessions both outside and within Council for new governors with familiarisation visits where Councillors can see what we are responsible for, where our assets are and what the issues are that we will need Council decisions on.

Ngā manaakitanga, Andy Watson,
Mayor of Rangitikei.

Introducing our new Deputy Mayor

We welcomed our new Council in Bulls last week as they joined together for the first time for the Inaugural Council Meeting.

At the meeting, Mayor Andy Watson named Councillor Dave Wilson as Deputy Mayor. The new Deputy Mayor has been on Council for six years, where he has held the role of Chair of Assets and Infrastructure Committee Chair, and is now entering his third triennium.

Mayor Andy says that having interviewed all of the Councillors, he knows that Dave has total support for the role and is thrilled to have accepted him into the position.

Lottery Community funding round closes 30 November 2022.

The Manawatu-Whanganui Committee will prioritise requests with outcomes which can demonstrate a contribution towards:

- Connecting all people, communities, groups, hapū and iwi enabling them to thrive.
- People within communities working together to achieve shared community aspirations
- A request will be considered lower priority if:
- Organisations mahi that appear to not be connected in community.
- Organisations who do not demonstrate wider community benefit beyond their membership.
- Organisations that currently receive government funding, but are unable to show community need and benefit over and above their contracts.

Optimise your Inner Ecosystem

A Symbiotic Relationship

A vast yet microscopic community of comrades, mostly bacteria, live in and on your body. The majority of these microbes reside in your gut. This collective colony is your microbiome, and it is absolutely essential to your health. It plays a complex and critical role in helping you survive and thrive. In fact, there is almost no function in your body that your bacterial 'biome isn't connected to. The health of these curious critters is directly linked to your own, in a mutually beneficial relationship.

Bacteria with Benefits

Probiotics are defined as "live microorganisms which, when administered in adequate amounts, confer a health benefit on the host" (according to a 2001 UN/WHO panel). Put simply, they're often referred to as "good" bacteria. In order to deliver their payload of benefits, these microorganisms must survive the acidic journey through your stomach, to arrive at your colon where they can interact with cells, nutrients and existing bacteria. Populating your gut with good bacteria crowds out unwanted bugs and creates a healthier balance in your internal environment.

A Perfect Partnership

A diverse diet results in a more varied range of Probiotics need support from prebiotics to work effectively. Both 'biotics support good health by improving the function of your microbiome – building and maintaining a healthy abundance of bacteria and other microorganisms in your gut, creating an environment where they can flourish. A diverse and robust microbiome supports healthy digestion, gut and immune function, brain and mental health, and vitamin synthesis – with powerful positive effects extending to your entire body

Taihape Health Limited Leader Retires

Gemma Kennedy has devoted almost her entire working career to Taihape as a leader and steward, ensuring the health needs for the community were met and access to a range of services were delivered.

Gemma trained as a Registered Nurse in Palmerston North and after a period of living overseas, returned to Taihape to settle and raise her family. Prior to being employed as the leader of Taihape Health Limited, which was established as a new business by Whanganui Regional Health Network (WRHN) in December 2011, Gemma was employed by the then Whanganui District Health Board (WDHB – now Te Whatu Ora Whanganui) and for WRHN as the Rural Practice Facilitator. After a bit of convincing, Gemma accepted the role as Clinical Coordinator for Taihape Health Limited (THL) and has remained in that role until this time.

Gemma has seen much change over the years as services in Taihape moved from a hospital to an inpatient rural health service, then to a Community Trust and finally to a subsidiary company of WRHN. In the establishment of THL, the bulk of the health services moved into the Otaihape Trust facility (previously the rest home and prior to refurbishment it was the maternity annexe). To ensure maternity services were still accessible, the team operated out of a small wing of the Taihape Rural Health Centre. This facility had undergone a refurbishment to accommodate rest home beds and a range of community and primary health services, that for a period was owned and operated by a community trust. Operating a team of clinicians from two facilities was not easy and the overhead costs were crippling. The Board of Directors have wrestled with this issue for many years and now, together with Iwi partner Mōkai Pātea Services and owner of the facility Te Whatu Ora Whanganui, are progressing a redevelopment to move primary care and Whānau Ora services back into the Rural Health Centre, to ensure integrated and holistic health and social services flourish with the community as the centre of the model.

Waiouru has also been a community of interest for THL. Historically, Taihape and Waiouru worked as a connected health system to serve the people that were not connected to the Defence Force base and workforce. While this community has seen a significant reduction in population over the years, as the Army reduced its presence and workforce on the campus, THL has remained committed to serving this community and continues to offer midwifery services and a Doctor/Nurse clinic in Waiouru, to make access convenient for this population.

Taihape has seen its share of disruption to services due to weather events, mountain eruptions and more recently the COVID-19 pandemic. Rural communities do not have the range of 'helping agencies' available to support these communities, as we see available in the cities, however through forging strong and effective relationships with the emergency services and in particular the local volunteer fire brigade and Police, Gemma and the team has ensured that our most vulnerable have been cared for and have what they need in their time of need. She would rally the workforce that was available and collectively they would do what was required, whether it was delivering meals on wheels, transferring unwell patients, or just moving them to a facility where they could have a shower; given they had experienced days without power.

For a leader to flourish and deliver a consistent standard of services over many years in a small community, requires you to demonstrate courage, tenacity, kindness, a willingness to advocate for your team and be confident to innovatively change how they are working, to ensure access to services was maintained. Gemma exhibited all these qualities. For some less aware, they soon learnt that to trample over Gemma's mana was at their own peril! Gemma has been resourceful and persistent in ensuring the Taihape Health services maintained a high standard of service for the community they serve, and the workforce was able to deliver to their potential. Maintaining a doctor workforce over the years has been challenging, but with her dogged determination, we now see a capable workforce of Doctors, Nurses, Social Work, Midwives, Kaimahi and the support team, working together to ensure people received the care they need.

Gemma has perhaps left the greatest legacy of all. She has designed an exit strategy that will ensure the transfer of leadership to a colleague from the community, who has also served her community and Iwi as significantly as Gemma. The reins are transferring to Ngawini Martin, who will operate a transition process from the leadership role she has at Mōkai Pātea Services to Taihape Health Limited. This transfer of leadership sits very comfortably with the integrated development, which will see Mōkai Pātea Services Whānau Ora workforce integrate with the Taihape Health team (in the Rural Health Centre).

Gemma Kennedy (L) and Julie Nitschke

The intent is not to continue as we are, but to create a new way of working that focuses on the strengths both services have to offer in serving one population. Taihape has always been on the leading edge of change and this is just another example of how rural communities create their own future.

On behalf of the WRHN Chair; Ken Young and Board, the Chair of Taihape Directors; Julie Nitschke and Board, and the Integrated Development Leads; Tracey Piki Te Ora Hiroa and Jude MacDonald, we sincerely thank you Gemma for all you have given to ensure the services at Taihape Health have responded to the needs of the population. We appreciate that rural leaders have less ability to enjoy 'quiet time' and generally remain on call for their services, despite the day of the week or if they are on leave. We are aware of the time that you have committed to this role and wish you much peace and freedom to enjoy the next phase of your life, and new adventures no matter what they will be.

Gardening in Taihape

All of a sudden summer arrived, well what feels like summer anyway. These warmer days will produce vast growth throughout our gardens after the rainy season and now we will move into a period of watering and summer maintenance. Mulching will help preserve the moisture levels in our gardens and if you have mulch through the winter months then you'll be ahead of the game. However mulching can still be a part of your gardening routine through November.

Vegetables will benefit from fertilizing and spraying to help them in their growth and also keep pests at bay. Be sure to carefully cultivate your vegetable garden beds to rid them of weeds and to ensure a continuous throughout the summer a successional planting plan can be adopted. This will be sowing and planting in three to four week intervals of your favourite produce to see you through.

For flowering through the summer, you can adopt the technique of removing rose shoots down to the nearest three or four buds will encourage later blooming.

With any garden activities moving into summer the key will be observation. Watering when necessary, fertilizing and spraying these key components will bring your garden into full fruition.

Happy Gardening.

Forestry Differential Public Meeting

We're seeking insight and feedback from the forestry industry and other stakeholders regarding the introduction of a proposed differential rate for forestry.

The proposed forestry differential seeks to introduce a differential rate to forestry properties to recover some of the costs of repairing damage to roads caused by forestry vehicles; an approach that has been taken by a number of other local authorities in New Zealand. Council's preferred choice outlined in the 2022/2023 Annual Plan was to introduce a 1.5 rate differential on the Roding Targeted Rate for properties that are classified as Forestry.

Based on the feedback we received through the consultation, Council decided to defer implementing a differential rate until we had the opportunity to work further with the Forestry Industry, iwi and key stakeholders, to hear what other options may be available.

If you're interested in sharing your thoughts, feedback and ideas on the proposed differential, please join us for the first public consultation on Tuesday 15 November, 5pm - 6.30pm at the Hunterville Town Hall to meet with Mayor Andy Watson and council Staff. This event is open to anyone who is interested in engaging with Rangitikei District Council about this issue.

- 5pm - 6.30pm
- Tuesday 15 November
- Hunterville Town Hall

If you're likely to attend this event, please RSVP to Michael.Willoughby@rangitikei.govt.nz. If you are unable to attend this event, but would like to stay in the loop about this consultation, you can sign up to the RDC Forestry Differential mailing list here: www.rangitikei.govt.nz/forestryengagement
